

VISION 2049

Vision 2049 was an office-wide design charrette to celebrate the creativity of our staff. The goal was to envision what the future of Oklahoma could look like in 30 years if Oklahoma City and Tulsa worked cooperatively to develop a high-speed transit corridor with dense development between the cities or "MidOK". One of the catalysts for the corridor would be a new international transit-hub directly between OKC and Tulsa that would be designed for future modes of transit that could include autonomous vehicles and hypersonic travel. With new direct connections across the globe, both cities would have increased access to workforce talent, forward-thinking industry, and the ability to further grow their thriving cultures.

The project was highlighted on the cover of Oklahoma Magazine in the September 2019 issue and had a feature article.
